Another federal government loan is to be floated. A few private individuals would like to be able to float loans with the same facility as governments.

The reduced freight rate over the Great Lakes grain route isn't going to boost the Hudson's Bay route.

If the United States would accept the result of the Literary Digest poll it would save the country a lot of expense in the presidential elections. In past elections the results of the Digest poll have been remarkably close to the actual election returns. The Digest reports Roosevelt now leading Hoover by three to two.

A group of P. R. officials is now touring Canada, inspecting the different parts of the railway system and getting first-hand information on conditions. While the object of the visit has been announced, it will probably be followed by further economy measures and reduction in operating expenses.

Decision of the federal government to establish work camps for the single jobless comes as a relief to the cities of the west. The cities have been under a heavy burden of expense supporting thousands of transients in addition to their own resident unemployed. The transients' problem is a federal one and at last has been recognized as such.

Hard hit as has been the southern section of Alberta during the past two years, it is significant to note that a far greater number of persons in the northern part of the province have been granted certificates as provided under the Debt Adjustment Act. The October 15th issue of the Alberta Gazette gives a list of 111 names of persons to whom certificates have been issued at Edmonton, and only 25 issued at Calgary.

HALLOWE'EN

With the approach of the Halloween season the local civic authorities are warning that vandalism will not be tolerated on the night of this annual prank-playing celebration.

The authorities do not wish to be joy-killers. They do not object to the boys having their fun, but they do object to willful destruction of property. They ask, therefore, that on All Hallows' Eve the boys confine their pranks to harmless fun and refrain from the vicious practice of damaging property and removing moveable objects to inconvenience the owners.

The newly organized Boy Scouts can greatly help in making Halloween respectable. Some of the pranks that have been played in past years are contrary to the ethics of a scout. Here is an opportunity for the local boys to show they are good scouts. They can enjoy a lot of good fun without destroying other people's property.

NO BONUS FOR WHEAT GROWERS

Premier Bennett's announcement that the federal government would not pay a bonus to the growers of the 1932 wheat crop is disappointing to western farmers.

The west raised a big crop of wheat this year. The harvesting, threshing, and hauling of this crop to the terminal elevators created employment for thousands of men, all of whom are being profitably reimbursed for their work. But the farmer is not getting a profit. His year's labor is returning him only a fraction of what he is actually entitled to.

The granting of a five cents per bushel bonus on last year's wheat crop led wheat growers to hope for a continuation of government assistance this year, inasmuch as the wheat growers' position this year is not improved over last year. Some wanted aid on an acreage basis, and others were content to accept the bushelage basis.

Premier Bennett left no misunderstanding as to the government's stand on the question. He stated that the government was not in a financial position to assist the wheat growers this year. Representatives of the wheat growers sought a five cents per bushel bonus. Mr. Bennett apparently made no offer to compromise, and so far as we know, neither did the bonus seekers. The five cents a bushel bonus was asked, and refused.

No doubt the federal government is sorely pressed for money but so are the wheat growers and government aid, even if it amounted to only half that given for last year's crop, would have smoothed over many of the rough spots in the road the wheat grower is travelling today.

A MISUNDERSTANDING

(The Hanna Herald)

The Bassano Mail takes us to task for our reference to E. J. Garland, M.P., blaming the Canadian banks for the depression. The Mail draws our attention to the actual remarks made by Mr. Garland which blamed the depression on the banking systems of the world.

If The Herald has done Mr. Garland an injustice we freely and voluntarily offer our apologies and hasten to make amends. We have no particular objective to attain in championing the cause of the banks, but we do think that the Canadian banking system has proven itself to be immeasurably superior to that of the United States where some three thousand banks closed their doors during the past three years.

News of the Week

MOVE TO CANCEL WAR DEBTS

PARIS, Oct. 25.—The fight against payment on Dec. 15 of $200,000,000 interest instalment on the French debt to the United States is expected to develop when parliament opens on Tuesday, despite efforts in some quarters to postpone the whole issue until after the 17th presidential elections. Premier Herriot said the rest of the government are maintaining silence, but it already has been announced there will be several interpellations when the Chamber of Commerce assembles. The Digest reports Herriot said the government's campaign against payment. Le Journal des Debats declared the time has come despite the presidential election; to declare that France does not intend to pay so long as Germany is not obliged to pay reparations.

ONTARIO COW MILKERS' CHAMPION

OTTAWA, Oct. 26.—Placerville World, a five-year-old Ayrshire cow, owned by Frank R. O'Connor, Margate farm, Beaufort, Ontario, is a world's champion. She has just completed a 30-day test. The Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association made the announce ment Saturday. The statement says: "This cow has given a total of 24,335 pounds of milk, 1005 pounds of butterfat. Average test, 4.13 per cent, milking three times a day, and therefore becomes the Ayrshire world champion butterfat and milk producing five year old cow. Moreover, she also ranks as fourth highest butter fat producing Ayrshire cow of all time."

WORK CAMPS FOR SINGLE UNEMPLOYED

EDMONTON, Oct. 24.—Work camps will be established in the national parks and probably elsewhere in the province as a means of absorbing the single unemployed men now congregating in the cities. The Dominion government will bear all the cost of food, general maintenance and work clothing for the men, and all other administrative costs, including material, will be borne by the province.

This is the gist of the new policy for unemployment relief agreed to by the Dominion government and discussed in a conference Monday morning between Dr. W. J. Black, federal relief agent, and provincial government ministers. Important details of the scheme have still to be worked out, including the method for which work camps can be established outside the cities, and the extent to which mass feeding in the cities can be undertaken as an alternative.

Dr. Black's mission to the west applies only to homeless single men who do not affect in any way the question of relief to married men.

BRITISH JOBLESS TREK TO LONDON

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Gathering converts as they advance, nine groups of unemployed continued their march on London from many points in the country, on Monday. Undeterred by almost incessant rain over the week-end, they came from Scotland and Wales and from the textile district of Manchester, determined to present their plea for government relief.

They want the city to provide 100 pounds of coal a week to each unemployed family. They want a plant of grade "A" milk each day for each child of unemployed parents; free boots and shoes on demand for the unemployed and their dependents, and the rent of all houses reduced 25 per cent.

EUROPE DEADLOCK ON DISARMAMENT

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Sir John Simon, secretary for foreign affairs, revealed today that a European deadlock continues over the proposed four-power emergency disarmament conference between France and Germany still were unable to agree on a meeting place. Pressed for a statement concerning the possible danger of Germany disarming while the disarmament conference progressed, Sir John said the purpose of the emergency conference was to prevent such a course, but that no definite statement of German policy has been made.

NO WHEAT BONUS THIS YEAR, SAYS BENNETT

OTTAWA, Oct. 25.—The Dominion is not in a position to pay a wheat bonus this year, Premier R. B. Bennett told the House of Commons today. "The government is not in a financial position to pay the bonus on wheat in 1932," said the premier. His statement was made in reply to a question put by Arthur I. Beaudine, Liberal. The Dominion government paid a bonus of five cents a bushel for all 1931 crop delivered to elevators. The amount of bonus paid for the three prairie provinces reached a total of approximately $1,000,000, of which Alberta received $500,000. This sum represented a total of 250,000,000 bushels of wheat of which Alberta contributed 121,000,000 bushels.

BLAME OFFICERS FOR LOSS HUDSON BAY SHIP

OTTAWA, Oct. 25.—The master and chief officer of the British freighter Bright Fan were held in default, contributing to the loss of their vessel on an iceberg in Hudson Strait, in the judgment of the court of inquiry handed down Tuesday. The court held that a proper lookout had not been maintained. No disciplinary action was taken by the court, in accordance with the instructions of the sitting minister of marine, who desired only that responsibility for the disaster be fixed. The Bright Fan, grain laden from Churchill and bound for Ennad, struck an iceberg in Hudson Strait and sank three hours later.

SINGLE MEN TO WORK IN PARKS

OTTAWA, Oct. 25.—A white wash handed in the estimated minimum of single men who will be put to work in the Dominion parks this winter as a measure of urban unemployment relief. The actual number engaged will likely be an average hundred men. The men will have their "keep" and a monthly allowance of $5. The operation will be carried out at Riding Mountain Park, Manitoba, Prince Albert Park, Saskatchewan, and Banff, Elk Island, and Waterton Lake Parks, Alberta. Operations are proceeding also at the Big Bend in the Golden-Hawke highway in British Columbia.

HALF CENT RATE CUT ON LAKES ROUTE

WINNIPEG, Oct. 25.—A reduction of half a cent per bushel in the freight rate on wheat from Port William to Montreal was announced here tonight. The rate, effective from Saturday, will be six and one-half cents per bushel as against seven cents charged since Oct. 1. The reduction follows complaints made to Ottawa by representatives of the prairie governments and the western wheat pools who considered prevailing rates excessive in view of declining wheat prices.

Of Limited Use

Having been shown the speaking tube and had its use explained, Flynn, the new porter, blew a mighty blast on it. Hearing the whistle, his employer came to the tube.

"Yes," he answered. "The Ol' Paddy Flynn. Are ye Mr. Hobart?"

"If you," said the employer. "Well, this," yelled Flynn, "will you put yer head out of the second story window while Ol' skipper out the pavement? Or want to speak to ye?"

Met His Match

Victor: "I have pretty lost your parrot to that wren so terribly."

Hostess: "Yes, poor dear, we found him dead on the golf links."

Grocer: "You want a pound of ochre? Is it red ochre for making paint?"

Small Boy: "No, it's tappy ochre for making puddings."

Have you heard the one about the fellow with a hap trying to tell a girl that he liked her size?

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT

Men were drilling and sinking shafts under the New Hudson and Manhattan, was to be accomplished, the last deep drift, four hundred and more feet, in the solid rock of the parking, running city. It was a magnificent enterprise, a cause, a crusade, a direct reply to those who give scant honor to the engineer.

His appointment, his boss, accomplished in a moment. These men wasted no time. "Report Section Five, Shift Eleven, to Engineer Harbort, Monday, eight a.m." The division engineer, named Wild, shook his head. "Keep your eyes open, and good luck!" John was on the street and entering the new subway at 181st Street.

"Why did he wish me good luck?" he wondered. "A man sitting next to John told a paper, he saw the headline, 'Ten Men Killed at Aqueduct Slip.' It was printed in red and farther down was listed a long record of other casualties and deaths."

John stopped at the field house marked shift 11. He met the gang, Malling, a Penn. man, and Harrow or Boston Tech. These fellows had and extra room in a small apartment near the work. "Sure, come in, it's handy here and you can't hear all the blast if you're a sound sleeper."

James Malling, C. E., has already been so important with driving the Pennsylvania tubes. He had the healthy pallor of the men who have worked in shields, under pressure. "Come up here for my health."

Rather get gunned than doubled with the bonds. Take my tip, Brown. "Keep out of it!" He spoke with the assurance of a man of immense experience.

Everywhere an earnest activity prevailed, the engineers were there; these men were doing. They were assembling the machinery for sinking a shaft in Morningside Park. A swearing boss driver was raging a gang of rulen Polack workmen; several engineers stood about discussing location prints, and Malling, in charge of a new transit, was directing some youths carrying a slivery take and a plumb bob. He beckoned to John.

"Don't report until Monday," he advised. "They run this job like a war," he added with a certain pride. "You got your orders; see Harbort at eight, sharp, blue Monday, and then prompt! prompt! prompt! Hey!" he barked to the eyes-out of the transit and bowed to his assistants. "Left, damnit, left! Don't you fellows know the signals?" Malling straightened himself with a smile of important disgust.

"Damnit, Brown, it's all hell to get these rodents to use their heads."

The experienced engineer was speaking with authority. "We engineers got to lead 'em down," he added with conviction. John was leaving. "See you later," Malling called, and John left the exciting scene. "We engineers!" He felt a lost caller, and Monday morning seemed a year away. John was very young.

He went to his new room, unpacked the photograph of Josephine and looked at her image long and thoughtfully. He called up Van Horn and had also talked with Josephine for a moment over the telephone, she seemed glad to hear from him. Her laugh was familiar. John remembered nothing but the laugh. Her very reticence conveyed things that seemed bound to bring them close together again. The warmth of young summer was in the air; lovers were walking in the park across the way.

Van Horn remained in the city. He just refused to leave. Josephine in the dark cool house in the middle Fifties, agreed with those millions who have said: "New York is a splendid summer resort."

As many people were always in or about town, and as Josephine had several latent problems confronting her, the city, in the summer took on the proportions of an adventure. Josephine was frankly in the business of living successfully. She had no intention of being anything but a success, and not merely a social success, but to achieve freedom, and expression, and well, lots of other things besides. In fact she was not above the plane of experiment. The artless dropping of a fold of her crepe kimono, the closeness of her firm breasts, for an instant plain reflected light of a table lamp, beneath John's eyes, as she had bent over him, placing the tray of toast and tea upon his bed, on the mornings of his courtship, nearly happened as she planned. She recalled his quickly mounting color, her bustling of the pillow under his head, bending close above him, breathing the freshness of her morning hair. It was all so intimate and innocent.

And John had never asked anything. It puzzled her. Boys proposed to her, almost as a matter of course. Gerrit Rantoul had proposed, and was waiting her reply. Josephine still felt Rantoul standing over her, tall and firm and charming, his white hair a mark of distinction rather than of age. He once told her, half laughingly, "I guess I was born that way."

Rantoul was wealthy, belonged to good clubs, had office in the financial district, and had leisure and just enough contact with great affairs to make him an extraordinary companion. He was constantly meeting important men. A word or two, a mere hint, gave Josephine the feeling of mingling in a consequential world. It was so different from Gilbert Van Horn's world, a place utterly divorced from business, his gossip, or mourning.

Women were attracted by Rantoul, women always had been attracted to him. Charming women, Josephine knew, would take him in as instant and as loved her. She was certain of that, loved her intensely. With passion held in mastery reserve. Her was a compelling figure, she often thought of him as a Richard Bradshaw Davis here, a youngster of great renown, decorated by brother poets. Josephine laughingly told this to Rantoul. When they dined that night at the West-Hamblen's, Rantoul wore a yellow and red suit across his breast with a brilliant 10-point star. A sparkling order hung about his neck by a purple ribbon. As the bracelet of his evening coat, over his head, was a row of overlapping medals. It was the night he proposed.

John had never proposed to her, probably never would, or perhaps had never had the chance. Van Horn was dining at the dock. It was Friday night, a lovely night by the way, with so many people always eating fish, and Aunt Wen was in the midst of a book.

John had called up only an hour before. It was six o'clock. Perhaps he was still at his desk. He would call him, and would leave for Rantoul at his room, that she could not see him. After all, Josephine could see Rantoul often, but that night she wanted to see John Brown.

They met an hour later at the party, and waited, east, through Fifty-ninth Street to the Third Avenue L. It was a familiar station to John, in a reminiscent way, as indeed the entire city was reminiscent and crowded with surprises. The same old platform and rails, but an electrical train carried them down through the close reticement of the East Side. Jacob Rills had written about Blums, disturbingly, and Theodore Roosevelt had endorsed his words; this gave the statements a sentimental and literary value.

"John, I'm so glad to see you alone," Josephine was starting things early. "There's a lovely place, the Cafe Boulevard, so Romantic. John, and, with you, I'm not afraid." A few weeks before Rantoul had protected her there. John Brown might have no medals, she mused, moving closer to him, but he did have an uncanny fascination on that shimmering night.

John procured a table on the balcony, ten feet or so above the crowded street, where they could dine, under the awnings, in open air, and still in sight of the straining things within.

Josephine sank into her seat with a sigh. They were very fortunate indeed in getting that delightful table.

On their side downwards they had talked the common-places of their separation. But once at the table, and alone, as if by magic, John and Josephine were again on the fatal plane of delicious intimacy.

Josephine smiles. John noted the morose suggestion of a dimple. A mood of perfect understanding seemed to permeate the air. The dinner was superb. She had asked for a cocktail and John joined her, and a bottle of St. Julien added flavor to the dishes. Cafe Boulevard always anous for its coffee, outdied itself on that Arabian night. They ate their loss and lingered, while John smoked a cigar grandly, blowing fragrant clouds through the hedge as they leaned across the table tete-a-tete. Blue wreaths drifted slowly back across her hair.

"Do you mind the smoke, Jo?" He used the diminutive easily.

"No, John, I love it." Her face was close to his, her hair gave back the faintest perfume. She was even lovelier than he had imagined her in his fondest dreams; she was an angel.

As John talked Josephine was glad, so glad to be with him. He was finer, more manly, more handsome than ever. John talked as he had never talked before. His life at the University, in the atmosphere of recognized ideas, had broadened him. He unbared great ambitions ripe for expression in that understanding night. His surer outlook and his burning belief in the great dignity of the career ahead, glorified him. He would be a builder, "like Rantoul, yes, like Rantoul," a builder in the greatest city of the world.

Something from within smote Josephine; it came, a cold breath of doubt, she was losing ground, slipping in a mental peak as she compared her lovers. She missed the tight, high-colored skin of the older man, spontaneously flushed, at times, perhaps by wine. The crisp white hair of Rantoul was less silky, and less thick, than the youthful crop of John Brown, and she missed that careful guarded manner, the habit of an older man, but which she then set down to cunning. John swept her alone in a flood of emotion. His ponder daunted her; it was a terrible emotion. She dared not try to fascinate or charm. Love slashed her with delicious pain. Doubt dropped away and in her instant of surrender, her hand on John's was transcendent power.

Rantoul vanished from her mind, and John Brown, or close across the table, clasping her hand, her pulses, her soul, was the finer man, wealthier, by twenty years, rich full years who was to share with him, love with him. His grip tightened; he whispered, "Darling, will you marry me?" The question had been in his eyes. She heard the words, the fervent words carrying her beyond all thought or time or calculation. "Will you wait for me?" his eager tones were tender. "Will you wait?" Their eyes met, swimmingly. She whispered, "Yes." Rantoul was forgotten; her plans and structures tumbled and re-formed.

HILL PORTER STILL

GOING STRONG IN BARBARA

A newspaper despatch from Coquille, Oregon, tells of the baseball activities of Bill Porter, who operated a billiard hall in Basano some years ago, and was one of the most colorful baseball figures in southern Alberta.

The Coquille despatch says that six pennants have been won by Bill Porter, manager of the Coquille Loggers. Bill is Coquille's premier baseball manager. Bill is just forty-five years old, and still plays baseball, season in and season out. He has played baseball for 30 years, 12 years spent in minor league baseball circles. He has acted in the role of manager for 16 years.

Now for the clubs managed by this notable figure: Pocatello, Idaho; Basano, Alberta; and the Coquille Loggers. The most outstanding achievement in his managing two Oregon state championship teams.

Porter broke into league ball in the year 1908 with Seattle in the Northwestern League. Bill has played for the following clubs: Seattle, Butte, Salt Lake, Moose Jaw, Calgary, Fort William, Winnipeg, Basano, and our own Portland Beavers, Portland Colts, Marshfield, and Coquille Loggers.

Bill Porter started his colorful career as catcher, but in the course of his baseball days he has played every position.

Porter now operates an athletic club, hotel, billiard and pool hall in Coquille, Oregon.

THE PICTURES

The screen's most unique talent personally, told the world over for himself, his songs, his vitality, comes to the Orpheum Theatre Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week, Oct. 27, 28, 29.

"The Smiling Lieutenant." He is Maurice Chevalier, the smiling French entertainer whose love-making and love-singing have made him the idol of two continents.

"The Smiling Lieutenant" is a rollicking romance with all the love and song appeal of his first movie picture "Innocents of Paris." Other stars are Claudette Colbert, Miriam Hopkins, and Charles Rogers, lovable comedian in an important supporting part.

The story deals with the delicious romance of a young lieutenant of the cavalry whose smile gets him involved with two women, one a married woman, whose husband he loves and wants to marry; the other an old fashioned princess who loves him and whom he is forced to marry. How this marriage turns his life upside down, and how the unwanted wife turns the table on her rival, is the amusing topic of the romance.

"The Miracle Man" coming next week, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, Nov. 3, 4, and 5, is a soul-wrenching drama, heart-breaking romance. The bitter and the sweet of life unfolded before you as a miraculous melody of the actor's art—warning the very fibres of your life with the benediction of its power to story, and its mastery.

MANY FARMERS WILL

FRED SHEEP THIS WINTER

Many farmers on the irrigation project will feed sheep this winter under the plan of the Brooks Livestock Feeders Limited.

The details of the feeding plan are somewhat similar to those of last year, with slight alterations.

The division of sheep in the Basano contract allows the breeder 40 per cent and the feeder 60 per cent. In addition, a reserve fund will be started by charging the feeder and breeder five cents on each lamb fed.

The board of directors consists of Robert Scott, Brooks, chairman; representative; R. T. Simpson, Tilley, sheep breeder; representative; W. H. Benson, Tilley, sheep feeder; representative; Dr. F. O. Eaton, Rosemary, sheep feeder; representative; A. A. Campbell, see. Basano, independent.

The board of supervision, appointed by the directors, consists of Robert Scott, Brooks; Neil Benson, Tilley; A. A. Campbell, Brooks. Another board of supervision to handle cattle feeding has yet to be appointed.

Farmers wishing to procure either lambs or yearling steers for finishing should send their applications immediately to Don H. Bark, superintendent of irrigation development, Brooks, in order that the inspection of feed and feed-lots, together with sorting of feeding stock, may commence.

HIGH C.P.R. OFFICIALS

PAY VISIT TO BASANO

A number of high officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company spent a few hours in Basano last Sunday. The party included: Mr. Lloyd, vice president in charge of finance; Mr. Humphries, assistant to Grant Hall; Mr. McNeill, assistant passenger traffic manager; Mr. Jefferson, freight traffic manager; all of Montreal; A. Halkett, general superintendent of Calgary district.

In the party were also a number of C.P.R. D.N.R. officials, including R. G. Porter, manager, Calgary; A. Griffin, chief engineer, Brooks; H. H. Bark, superintendent of development, Brooks; and Major K. Cross, assistant superintendent of operations and maintenance, Brooks.

Coming from Brooks, where they visited the irrigation works, the party lunched in Basano Sunday noon and afterwards, paid a visit to the irrigation dam and the railway yards here.

The Montreal officials are making a tour of inspection over the whole railway system in western Canada.

While the purpose of the tour was not announced, it is believed it is being made with a view to increasing the efficiency of the railway system.

A Final Warning

Bergant (addressing a particularly ill case recruit): "How many times must I tell you never to approach horses from the rear without speaking to them? One of these days you know, you will get kicked on the head, and then I'll have a lame horse on my hands."
